

"Trade At Home" The Slogan on Trip Through County

An Extended Friendship Making Tour Will be Conducted in Surrounding Country September 9 and 10

THEY WILL NOT SOLICIT ANY BUSINESS

TO CONTROL ALL BOXING

(By United Press)
Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—An organization to control the sport of pugilism all over America is expected to be given birth at a two-day conference of boxing promoters and managers which assembled here today. Tom Andrews, the Milwaukee promoter and sport writer, is the chief sponsor for the moment, which has received the endorsement of club managers and others interested in the game in all parts of the country. The proposed organization is not to concern itself with the money end of the game, but will draft and seek to enforce uniform rules concerning the weights, eliminating bouts, conflicts of dates, and other matters that in the past have seriously interfered with the best interests of the sport. Champions, it is expected, will have the law laid down to them by the new organization. Proposals as to when and with whom champions must fight and often they should defend their titles and the weights at which they should fight, are matters to receive the attention of the new organization.

GERMAN-AMERICANS TO PROTEST

(By United Press)
Canton, O., Aug. 21.—Resolutions declaring the love and loyalty of its members for the United States and its institutions, but at the same time protesting against the alleged ungrateful attitude of this government in regards to the European war, are expected to be adopted by the German-American Alliance of Ohio at its convention which opened here today for a two-day session. The convention is attended by representatives of the organization in every part of the state.

(By United Press)
Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—Today's sailing of the Tampico marks the inauguration of a regular steamship service to be maintained by the Oregon-California Shipping Company between Philadelphia and Pacific coast ports, by way of the Panama canal. The Tampico is to be followed two weeks hence by the Eureka. Both vessels are between-deck steamships, especially adapted to hauling general cargo.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

(By United Press)
San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—"Religious Education and the New World" which is to be held at the exposition which is to be held at the exposition during the coming week under the auspices of the Religious Education Association of the United States. Henry Churchill King, president of the Chicago, and David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Stanford University, are scheduled as the principal speakers.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS ORGANIZING

a two days get-acquainted or friendship-making automobile tour through Clearfield county and nearby towns and country districts. A preliminary meeting was held last night in the Chamber of Commerce office. In attendance were James Mitchell, H. B. Powell, P. T. Davis, Geo. M. Rosser, John Dimeling, F. G. Betts, A. D. Gould, C. L. Torrence, Wm. Boyce and Secretary Bodine.

The general committee is composed of James Mitchell, H. B. Powell, P. T. Davis. Three special committees are being organized to have charge of the plans and details of the trip, viz., committee on routes, committee on advertising, and committee on organization and transportation. The personnel of these committees will be announced in a few days.

Business men have received the announcement of the tour with great enthusiasm and it is expected that every Clearfield firm will be represented, including professional offices.

The tour will be purely one of friendship making. Business will not be solicited. The residents of the many neighboring towns and their surrounding territory will be encouraged to "trade at home," when their home business houses can satisfy their requirements, and never to go outside the county and nearby towns for merchandise when they can buy it near at hand. Keep the money in the Clearfield district. Strong emphasis will be put upon the trading at home idea as a means of helping build up and support the home community.

Trading with mail order houses will be discouraged. People all along the line of the tour will be urged to make their purchases from firms who have invested their money in Clearfield county and other nearby towns, and not send their money to the big mail order houses in distant cities. Money spent with outside concerns can never do our own section any good. It is gone, never to return. Mail order houses get hundreds of thousands of dollars from the Clearfield district that should be kept at home, where it stands some chance of drifting back into the pockets of those who pay it out. Money invested at home enriches and makes more prosperous the entire home district.

Good-fellowship among the citizens of our many county communities will be encouraged. Enthusiasm over and loyalty toward the development of the wonderful natural resources and business advantages of our county and neighboring business territory will be inspired by series of business and social talks all along the route.

NEGROES TO HOLD JUBILEE

(By United Press)
Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—Final preparations were completed today for the Lincoln jubilee and half century anniversary exposition which will open in the Coliseum tomorrow for a three weeks' engagement. The purpose of the exposition is to show the progress of the negro race during the fifty years since emancipation. Exhibits have been sent by negro schools and business and other organizations of negroes in many states.

A SOULFUL SLEEPER

(By United Press)
Columbus, O., Aug. 21.—Edward Goetz is some sleeper. He climbed out of his bed while sound asleep the other night, walked to the window and fell to the sidewalk. It was a twenty-foot drop. Goetz was still asleep when the policeman found him. They shook him and he awoke. "You to the hospital," said the cops. But Goetz went back up stairs to finish his sleep.

CHARGES BROUGHT AGAINST DRIVER IN AUTO ACCIDENT

District Attorney Will Try Case In Civil Courts—Fine of $100 to $300 if Guilty

Affair Seems to be Climax of Series of Instances Exhausting Authorities
Patience—Matters Not Yet Fully Decided.

The district attorney has taken steps toward bringing criminal charges against Emory Shaw for running an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and reckless driving. It is also probable that the charge of aggravated assault and battery will be added to these. Shaw will be held on bail pending the result of a hearing. The fine if found guilty in the cases of driving while under the influence of liquor is a minimum of $100 and not over $300 and the revoking of the drivers license.

It was the expressed opinion of the authorities about town yesterday evening that such instances as have been noticed lately, similar to that of last Thursday evening, are becoming more frequent and are rapidly exhausting the patience of the officials. The accident last Thursday evening, which the district attorney is taking action on seems to have been the climax of a series of similar affairs.

The district attorney announced this afternoon that he had not fully decided on the course of procedure, nor the extent to which the charges will be made.

The disposition of the injured boy's family toward the matter is not yet known, but it is the belief of those in a position to know, that the family have no intentions of bringing civil charges to recover damages but will let the district attorney proceed with his action.

GLASS FACTORY HAS PASSED LIMIT OF GUARANTEE

Will Make Improvements on Grounds Facing River

The Kupfer Glass Works has already passed the payroll limit guaranteed to the Chamber of Commerce. They are more than a year and ten months ahead of their guarantee. This is making good, plus.

When the glass factory was persuaded to come here by the Chamber of Commerce, guaranteed to pay a certain amount in five years in wages. They have been here three years and two months and have paid out up to this time the same amount that they had guaranteed for the five years.

Mr. Kupfer of the cut glass plant, is contemplating making improvements which will make the river front more attractive.

MEETING OF REPUBLICANS

LIVELY CAMPAIGN IN MANY STATES FOR FALL ELECTIONS

Although Year Seems To be "Off" Numerous States Are Hot of Fights

Missouri Campaign Ended at Primaries—State Officials to be Chosen in Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky and Mississippi—Interest in Much of the Strife.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—In the country at large this is a political "off year," but in several of the States lively campaigns are now in progress and will culminate on Nov. 2. The states in which governors and other of the principal state officials will be named this fall are Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky and Mississippi.

The campaign in Missouri was virtually ended by the primaries two weeks ago. The ticket named by the Democratic party at that time is assured of election. Theodore G. Bilbo, the present lieutenant governor, has been selected to succeed Earl Brewer in the governorship. Contests for minor state offices which were not decided at the first primary will be settled at the "run-off" next week.

Much of the interest in the Kentucky campaign ceased with the general primaries held in that state two weeks ago today. The big issue was the contest in the Democratic party over the prohibition question. Both the "wets" and the "drys" fought to name the candidate for governor. Former Congressman A. O. Stanley, the successful aspirant for the head of the Democratic ticket, favors a continuation of county local option. As Edwin P. Morrow, the Republican candidate for governor, is committed to the same policy, the contest over the prohibition issue is ended so far as the present campaign is concerned. From now on the contest will be a straight fight between the Democrats and Republicans on general party issues. Stanley is favored by the fact that Kentucky is normally a Democratic state. His Republican opponent, however, is young and aggressive and is counted on to make a good fight. The Republicans are counting on a certain amount of disaffection among the Democrats over the prohibition issue to help them to victory. The Progressives and Prohibitionists will have party tickets in the field, but neither is expected to figure prominently in the election.

The political situation in Maryland is similar to that in Kentucky. Democrats and Republicans will fight for the governorship and other officials on general party issues. The national leaders of both parties are expected to take a more or less active interest in the effect that a victory there in November may be expected to have on the national campaign next year. The nominations in Maryland will be made at the general primaries next month. United States Senator Blair Lee and Emerson C. Harrington, present State comptroller, are the rival candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. W. T. Warburton and O. E. Weller are contesting for the place at the head of the Republican ticket. Because of the general return of the Progressives to the Republican party, the Republicans are entering the campaign more confident than for several years.

To the country at large the campaign in Massachusetts furnishes more points of interest than the contests in any other State where elections are to be held this year. The tariff is the underlying issue of the campaign in the Bay State this fall, as it probably will be throughout a large section of the country a year hence. There is a demand on the part of Republican leaders and business men for revision upward, and the claim is made that but for the war the Underwood-Wilson law would have ruined the industries in New England. But in this connection is interesting to note that many leading Republican newspapers, while admitting the necessity for tariff correction, declare unhesitatingly that there should be no return to the regime of 10 or 15 years ago.

The state tickets of all parties in Massachusetts will be named at the general primaries one month from today, when the new law abolishing party enrollment will be given its first State-wide trial. There have been rumors of "plots" on the part of the politicians to take advantage of the provisions of the new law to defeat the wishes of the voters at large. But with the near approach of the primaries these rumors have faded away and the feeling prevails that no great change in methods or results will follow the workings of the new law.

Governor Walsh is confidently expected to receive a third nomination at the hands of the Democratic party. The contests for the head of the Republican ticket lies between former Congressman Samuel W. McCall and Lieutenant Governor Grafton D. Cushing. The "pedestrian campaign" of former Congressman Dietrick for the democratic nomination, the independent candidacy of former Governor Foss for the Republican nomination and the aspirations of William Shaw, general secretary of the Christian endeavor societies, to be elected governor on a prohibition platform, serve to give variety to the campaign with little possibility of affecting the general results.

HUNDREDS MOTOR TO THE EXPOSITION OVER CONTINENT

Hundreds of Americans Are Spending Their Vacations Traveling Overland

Many Drivers Crack San Francisco Traffic Regulation Every Day—Many Different Types of Cars—Auto's From Every State in Union Can be Seen in Garages.

BY FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

San Francisco, Aug. 21.—Hop in your fliver and come out to the fair. There are now hundreds, possibly thousands, of automobiles from every part of the country in San Francisco today. Some have been here long enough after trans-continental drives to be cleaned up so that they look like home cars. In that event the fact that they are several hundred miles from home is not revealed until they kick up the dust in your face and you catch a glimpse of their license tag. Others roll through the streets coated with dust and splattered with many thicknesses of mud. They are the new arrivals.

Flivvering to the Fair is obviously the way in which hundreds of Americans are spending their vacations. The Ferris are carrying scores of machines across the bay daily as they roll into Oakland and smelt along the last leg of their journey to Frisco. Packed away midst suitcases, tents, coats, and coverings of every description are dusty, sun-burned men and women. They may look like tramps, but they're happy.

Some of them have traveled from ocean to ocean. Others came from the northwest, middlewest or the south. But all have seen more of the country than they ever saw before or had hoped to see. Many of them have lived in the open for weeks. Fearing their appetites, the sea lions on the rocks off the Cliff House have disappeared. It is a real invasion of a great many wheels; an army of men, women and children drawn into the open and across the continent by the exposition, and, having been drawn, entering into the thrills of the new experience with vigor.

All the trans-continental trips are not being made "in the rough," as one motor enthusiast put it, but in hundreds of cases the parties have slept in the open at night, cooked their meals at the roadside and "got back to nature." Hotels are patronized only when the weather is bad or it is decided to grant special dispensation for a meal off a table, a tub and a soft bed. In the "de lux" trips, travel is by easy stages and the schedule is so framed as to bring the party within reach of a hotel by nightfall.

In one garage the other night cars from Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey and Michigan were standing side by side. In another were machines from New York, Illinois, Georgia, Alabama, Wisconsin and Indiana. The whole list of the states of the Union might be gone through an alphabet everyone there is representative car being cleaned up in some garage. Every driver observes the traffic rules he knew at home, but knowing nothing of San Francisco's rules the latter are cracked in fifty different ways each day.

The different types of cars which have traveled over desert and plain, forded rivers and climbed mountains, is not only startling, but in some cases appalling. The big machines are taken as a matter of course, but you ought to see some of the weather-beaten little fellows. It seems that for some of them every breath will be their last as the long journey is completed. They sneak into a garage with tail dragging and all pep gone. See them again, however, a short time afterward when the mud has been taken off and the dust cleaned out of their lungs and you'll see them, tail up and snorting, just as frisky as the day they left home.

SCORES OF BODIES FOUND AT SCENE OF TORNADO

SATURDAY EVENING AUGUST 21 1915

A JAW-BREAKER

To the American ear there is something suggestive of the elephantine in "majestaetsbeleidigung" German word for less-majesty or crime against the king but this word is light as air compared with the ponderosity of the Flemish or Low German word for horseless carriage which is said to have been adopted a few years ago by a committee of scholars who wished to frame a generally understood word that would signify "a carriage that is worked by means of petroleum that travels fast, that has no horses, and that does not run on rails," and who, after much intellectual wrestling, achieved the following: "Benzelpaardelooszonderspoorwegpetroirijtuig."

This fearful and wonderful thing may be wholly insignificant and therefore a just source of pride, but from the point of view of less ambitious and less resourceful outsiders it would seem that, rather than shoulder such a burden, it would have been better even to stoop to borrow the French "automobile" or the English "motor-car." German scholars hold that the English language is "dead" while their own is "living," that is, they are able at any time to construct out of the elementary constituents of German a new word which will at once be intelligible to all who speak the language, while English-speaking scholars are forced to dig up roots out of the Latin or Greek. That may be, but the average citizen would prefer that a light and serviceable article be borrowed from foreign sources than to stagger under an unspeakable word such as— (we spare the printer). Even awkward circumlocution is preferable to a monster stretching in bewildering perspective across a whole page.

THE STAFF OF LIFE

The promise of the vast yield of a billion bushels of wheat in the United States this year, at a time when it is imperative that Europe's shortage be made up elsewhere, renders uncommonly interesting and even topical the following authoritative statement of a scientific expert to the effect that wheat is exceptionally qualified and complete as a food, containing all the elements necessary to sustain life indefinitely:

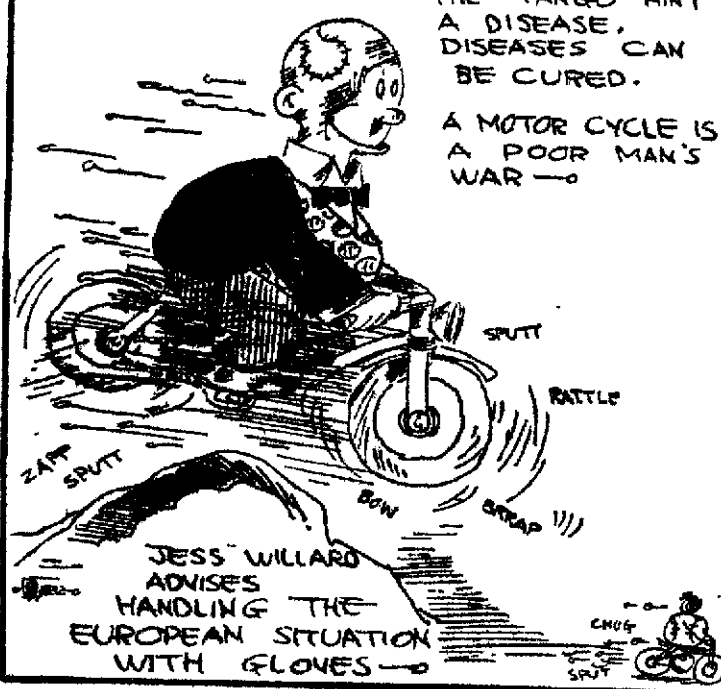

"In the human body there are seventeen combinations of the fourteen elements of food: water, gelatine, fat, phosphate of lime, albumen, carbonate of lime, fibrin, fluoride of calcium, phosphate of soda, phosphate of potash, phosphate of magnesia, chloride of sodium (common salt), sulphate of soda, carbonate of soda, sulphate of potash, peroxide of iron, silica. Is there any single food which contains fourteen elements, or in other words which supplies carbonates, phosphates and nitrates? There are a few that do this, one of which is wheat. The nitrates are found in the outside shell, the carbonates in the main portion, constituting about two-thirds of the entire grain, and the phosphates in the chit or germ. In fine white flour the centre alone is used, consisting of carbonates, or heat-producing substance with but a very slight mixture of nitrates. It is a wonderful fact that a grain of wheat contains all of the fourteen elements in very nearly the proper proportion. Whole-wheat bread contains all that the body requires, and it has been proved that it will sustain life indefinitely."

It is thus shown that wheat is par excellence the staff of human life, the chief of the good gifts presented by the vegetable kingdom to man.

Such it has been from the most ancient times. The bread of the ancients was the bread from wheat. They did not know how to analyze its constituent elements in the modern scientific method, but they perceived its extraordinary virtues and paid it the highest of tributes. In their system of symbols it was made to represent the good that is lived and practiced in a noble and perfect human life, just as the thirst-satisfying water of the clear cold spring, and the stimulating wine from the fruit of the vine, were made to represent that truth or knowledge which was as necessary to the perfect flowering of a good life as liquids are necessary for the profitable enjoyment of solid food.

Among the many superlative advantages of our great country is its situation within the zone where this most perfect of foods—the chief staff of the body's life—can be successfully grown in enormous quantities.

RABID RUDOLPH SAYS—

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Charleroi is among the highly important forge-and-foundry cities which have been brought behind the invading German lines. The following description of this widely famed industrial district was issued by the National Geographic Society today.

"Charleroi captured by the Germans at the outbreak of the war, was the center of the Belgian iron industry. Situated in the midst of a district rich in coal and iron, where there was an abundance of cheap thrifty, industrious labor, the little city made its products known throughout Europe, South America and the Near East. More than 400,000 people found support in a surrounding area of 190 square miles, while 40,000 men were employed in the factories and foundries of Charleroi.

"Against its broken sky-line, the smoke of its furnace fires ascend day and night, and close behind another freight train sped over the thick network of railroad in the hill country with an unending stream of metal material and manufactured ware. The highly developed railway net was, however, insufficient for the transport of the district's goods, much of which found its markets over the canals from Charleroi to Brussels and to Mons, thence through the main arteries of the Scheldt basin to the port of Antwerp and to Northern France.

"The coal mines around the city were operated at depths of 3,000 feet and more. The coal belt reaches in a long, narrow band, northeast-southwest, from Northern Belgium into France. The basis of the industry of the Charleroi district were its smelter and iron-working factories. Here, within two miles of the city, the iron works of Couillet turned out one-third of all the cast iron produced in Belgium. Large nail factories, glass works both for blown and plate glass, and a number of lesser industries thrive. There was a large increase of immigration from Northern France into the region, and the famous forest on Caesar's time was fast shrinking to mere classical memory.

"Charleroi was founded in 1666, and named after the willful sovereign, Charles II of Spain, by its Spanish governor Rodrigo. It lies upon the Sambre, and its communications with France and with the commercial centers of its own country are excellent. By the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, it became French and was fortified by the renowned Vauban. The little city twice withstood the might of William of Orange.

"There is a strong French element in the city's character. Many Frenchmen were in its mills and factories, and French peasant families grew much of the Charleroi's produce in the comparatively thin soil of the region. In 1894, it fell again into the hands of the French, later to become Dutch and finally Belgian. Wellington, the best-remembered lord among the Belgians, directed the re-fortification of the city in 1816. The Germans found the city's defenses negligible when they swept over the place in August, 1914.

DON'T'S

- Don't use coal oil to start a slow fire.
- Don't try to start any fire with coal oil. It is dangerous.
- Don't polish a stove while it is hot.
- Don't fill an oil or gasoline stove after dark. If you must fill them, never do so while lighted, as the flame might set fire to the vapor in the air and ignite the oil, causing an explosion.
- Don't leave a lamp burning when away from home.
- Don't leave a lamp turned down low, it is liable to cause an explosion.
- Don't use swinging lamps near an open widow.
- Don't use any but safety matches.
- Don't permit clothing or other articles in gasoline, benzene, or naphtha in the house.
- Don't throw gasoline, benzene, or naphtha in the sink or cesspools.
- Don't throw water on flames caused by burning gasoline, benzene, naphtha, or coal oil, as it spreads the flames. Smother it with a rug, quilt or heavy clothing.
- Don't clean beds with inflammable liquids.
- Don't light a match when looking for leaking gas.
- Don't put ashes in wooden boxes or barrels. Use metal cans.
- Don't throw hot ashes against fences or buildings.
- Don't fail to burn all rubbish. Watch it, and be sure the fire is out before you leave it.
- Don't burn rubbish near fences or buildings.
- Don't permit rubbish, paper or greasy rags to accumulate.

DOG DAYS AT WILDWOOD

(By United Press)
Wildwood, N. J., Aug. 19.—The members of the fashionable Summer colony at this resort "went to the dogs" today. The occasion was the annual dog parade over the famous five-mile promenade. The pageant included canines of every breed, size and color, and even the stray mongrels of the streets were not barred from the prize competition. Among some members of the colony, especially the family matrons, considerable comment was aroused by the fact that the dogs were given precedence over the babies who are to have their annual parade next Saturday.

REV. ROBERT C. PETERS

LINCOLN ON TEMPERANCE.

On September 28, 1863, a delegation of the Sons of Temperance waited on President Lincoln. In an address to them, Mr. Lincoln said:

"If I were better known than I am you would not need to be told that in the advocacy of the cause of temperance you have in me a friend and sympathizer. When I was a young man I, in a humble way, made temperance speeches and I think I may say to this day I have never, by my example belied what I then said.

"I think that the most reasonable men of the world have long since agreed that intemperance is one of the greatest if not the greatest of the evils among mankind."

This is the man that the liquor interests advertise as a saloon-keeper, a drinker of beer and an opposer of prohibition.

WHAT CAN ACCOUNT FOR THIS?

Of course prohibition does not prohibit, but the Temperance society of the Methodist church has received reports of not less than thirteen failures of breweries and distilleries within the past few months.

The production of beer has declined during the past eight months millions of barrels, and of whiskey, millions of gallons. The federal revenue from this source is falling off rapidly.

The stocks and bonds of the Distillers' Securities corporation, the American Maltting company and similar concerns are, to say the very least not quite as lively as a chigger at a picnic.

GERMANS NOT ALWAYS BEER-DRINKERS

Prof. Frederick von Reithdorf says: "The Germans adopted the drinking habit from foreigners. Neither the word wine (from the Latin, vinum) nor beer (from the Latin, bibere) are of German origin.

"Julius Caesar is authority for the fact that there was Prohibition in Germany 1900 years ago. In his 4th book on the Gallic war at the close of the second chapter, he says of the brave "Schwabenvolk" "Vinum ad omnino importari non sinunt quod ea re laborum ferendum remollescere homines atque effeminari arbitrantur." (They do not allow the importation of wine at all because they are of the opinion that wine weakens and effeminates people, rendering them incapable of a strenuous life.

PERSONAL LIBERTY HAS ITS LIMITS

"A man may not even do with his own body what he pleases," says Charles Steitzle.

"Suppose he tries to kill it—to commit suicide. If he succeeds, Billy Sunday says he will go to hell. If he fails he will go to jail. And yet if the United States government should decide to go to war with Germany or any other nation it assumes the right, if necessary, to send him to the front to be shot down. He belongs to the state as well as to himself. We have recently passed most stringent laws against the sale and use of certain kinds of drugs, because of the great injury which their use inflicts upon the human mind and body.

"If the state should decide that the saloon is a menace, and that is dispensing poison, then society has a right to take the saloon must go, no matter how it may affect anybody's personal liberty. We accept the restriction which the state imposes upon us in other relationships. Why not accept it with regard to the saloon, especially since it has been so clearly demonstrated that the interests of the saloon are always opposed to the interests of the workingman?"

SNEERS THAT ARE BECOMING SICKLY

Nobody but an idiot now sneers at temperance people as "crude," "fanatical," "busybodies," etc. In fact the temperance movement has taken on quality quite rapidly of late. For instance, listen to this long eared fanatic:

"There is nothing to be said in favor of alcohol. It is a drug; it is not a food, it is not even a stimulant. It impairs the action of the heart, the liver, the stomach, the kidneys. It congests the blood vessels. It lowers the temperature. It aggravates the effect of shock. It spoils havoc with the muscles and with the nerve centres. In the emotions it destroys ideals, it produces callousness to moral obligations, and it multiplies lunacy and crime. Lastly, it gives an entirely delusive sensation of increased efficiency. These statements are not arguable. They cannot be challenged. Its effects on the conduct of the war are notorious."

Who said this?

Why this is the brag of that bally ass, Arnold Bennett. Evidently, he is certainly in need of brewery culture.

READY FOR THE ELGIN RACES

(By United Press)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—Practice for the Chicago Automobile club and Elgin national challenge cup races, to be run on the Elgin circuit tomorrow and Saturday, is ended and the drivers and their assistants are today putting their racing motors in final conditions for the hard tests. Ralph De Palma will defend the trophies against a field that will include Earl Cooper, Gil Anderson and other of the most famous auto racers in the country. There is every prospect of exceedingly fast time. Some of Palma averaged better than 100 miles an hour. Since then, of course has been greatly improved. There is every prospect that the test in the coming races will average around seventy-eight of eighty miles an hour. The officials entering the meet are George F. Bell, chairman of the contest committee; Sam Beecroft, New York, referee; and Fred J. Wagner, starter.

TRIENNIAL TEST OF BIG MORTARS

(By United Press)

New York, Aug. 20.—The 20th mortars at Fort Totten, which are used up to prevent a hostile force from approaching this city by way of Long Island Sound, are to undergo their triennial tests during the beginning today. The big mortars are regarded as the most formidable of our coast defense weapons, lacking the range of the big guns constituting the outer defense. Three years ago, when the last test of the mortars was made, officers at Fort Totten warned residents within a radius of a few miles to take pictures from the open windows and park drives. This year the officers considered warning unnecessary, as there was vibration of any consequence the years ago.

ITALIAN EXODUS SMALL

(By United Press)

Washington, Aug. 19.—The small of Italians leaving the national capital to join their colors is not nearly so great as it was during the Turkish war. The outpouring at this time nearly demolished the district of the city. The reason is that comparatively few Italian immigrants have come into the last few years.

HORSES RACING AT PANAMA FAIR

(By United Press)

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 20.—Running races, legislated out of California several years ago when betting was stopped are to be revived tomorrow with the opening of a thirty-day meeting at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The Golden Gate Thoroughbred Breeders' association has been organized to conduct the meeting.

The stables at the exposition tracks are filled with fast horses, including the best that took part in the meeting just closed at Reno. The feature event of the opening day will be the Exposition Handicap at a mile.

C. D. Stevens, who acted as a starter at Reno, has been engaged to officiate in a similar capacity here. Walter Jennings, a well-known local horseman, will be the presiding judge and Dick Dyer, who was the starter at the old Emeryville track, will be pad-dock judge and timer.

OUR DAILY BIRTHDAY PARTY

Claude Graham-White, noted aviator and member of the British military aviation corps, born in Hampshire, England, 35 years ago today.

Frank A. Munsey, the pioneer publisher of popular-price magazines in America, born at Mercer, Me., 61 years ago today.

Dr. Donald J. Cowling, president of Carleton college, born in Cornwall, England, 35 years ago today.

Rev. Henry T. Graham, president of Hampden-Sidney college born at Winchester, Va., 50 years ago today.

William P. Maburn, assistant secretary of the United States treasury, born at Freeport Ill., 48 years ago today.

Frank J. Marshall, champion American chess player, born in New York city, 38 years ago today.

John G. Horgan, champion professional three-cushion billiard player, born in Owego, N. Y., 43 years ago today.

May Irwin has made arrangements to bring her new comedy, "No. 13 Washington Square," by Leroy Scott, to the Park Theatre for an engagement beginning next Monday night.

The piece will be produced under the direction of William Collier, which ought to be a strong factor in its success, providing William is as good a stage director as he is a comedian.

Among the plays now in rehearsal and scheduled for production in the near future are "The Missing Link," by Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey which Charles Dillingham will present at the Globe, with Elsie Janis in the stellar role.

The Jules Eckert Goodman play, "Just Outside the Door," which Henry Miller is preparing to produce in association with Klaw and Erlanger, and "Brother Masons," a comedy which H. H. Frazer will offer, with Frank McIntyre in the leading role.

The war in Europe is not to deprive us this year of the pleasure of seeing the customary big melodrama, imported direct from Drury Lane. The coming play is entitled "Stolen Orders" and it has been running in the big London play houses for two years. The entire production, including nearly 150 actors with speaking parts, will be brought over. The scenic specialties, according to advance announcement, make those of "The Whip" look like a Sunday school tableaux in comparison. The play shows the destruction of a Zep- pelin by an aeroplane and the attack

MUSICAL COMEDIES MORE OF A HIT THIS YEAR THAN DRAMA

Play Already On [Will Continue To Draw Crowds After Hot Weather Interruption]

Pieces to be Imported From Drury Lane Expected to Supercede All Others Brought From the Famous London Playhouse—"Stolen Orders" Has Tremendous Scenery.

New York, Aug. 20.—If the theatrical season of 1915-16 is now in full swing, as the newspapers state, then the "Gloom" who predicted that the spoken drama and higher forms of dramatic art are dead wasn't very far off after all. The early-season offerings, with one or two exceptions, have been of a most mediocre character. Unless the new plays to be presented next week score better than those already served up since the beginning of the season, several of which have resumed their runs after the hot weather interruption, will continue to draw the crowds.

So far the musical pieces have panned out better than the straight dramatic attractions. "The Blue Paradise," at the Casino, is a tune-ful operetta adapted from the Viennese and bids fair to be as successful as one of its predecessors. An equally favorable reception has been accorded the Herve-Briquet musical comedy, "The Girl Who Smiles," which is rounding out its second week at the Lyric. Then we have "The Girl From Utah," with Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian and Joe Cawthorne. The success with which this piece met when brought into New York at the close of the spring season, after an equally successful road tour, was sufficient in the eyes of the management to justify its revival for a limited engagement at the Knickerbocker Theatre.

And Speaking of the Knickerbocker serves as a reminder that next month will see the passing of this well known and popular theatre as a home of the legitimate drama. The Klaw and Erlanger and Charles Frohman interests have accepted an offer from a film corporation which will take possession early in September and convert the theatre into a moving picture house. Regular theatre prices from $2 down will prevail.

But to return the current attractions at the local theatres. "Under Fire," at the Hudson, is pronounced by the critics generally as the best of the recent crop of war dramas. "The Boomerang," at the Belasco, is a highly entertaining comedy, though hardly up to the best Belasco standard. Of farces we have "Some Baby" and "Search Me," the first holding forth at the Fulton and the second at the Gaiety. Both have been well received by those who enjoy an evening of rollicking entertainment.

The new plays presented this week have included "Common Clay," at the Republic; "Mr. Myd's Mystery," at the Comedy, and "Rolling Stones," at the Harris. "Common Clay" has met with a reception that seems to bear out the judgement of the Boston playgoers, who liked the piece so well that it was kept running in stock in the New England metropolis nearly the whole of last season. It is a really strong play and one that affords Jane Cowl and John Mason an excellent opportunity to display their talents.

"Mr. Myd's Mystery" has served to introduce Taylor Holmes as a star. "Rolling Stones" is the new Edgar Selwyn comedy. It is along lines very similar to "A Country Boy," but whether it proves as successful as the last-named play remains to be seen.

May Irwin has made arrangements to bring her new comedy, "No. 13 Washington Square," by Leroy Scott, to the Park Theatre for an engagement beginning next Monday night. The piece will be produced under the direction of William Collier, which ought to be a strong factor in its success, providing William is as good a stage director as he is a comedian.

PACKEY EXPECTED TO FAIL IN TRY TO "COME BACK"

Middleweight Fighter Has Been Out of Ring For Two Years Running Brewery

Will Meet Mike Gibbons in Zenith of Power and Battle for Large Purse—Veteran Ringman Can't See Packey's Chances at All.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES (United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Aug. 20.—Packey McFarland has a lot to fight for when he steps into the ring with Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul wraith, on the night of Sept. 11. He will be battling for three things, for any one of which the majority of boxers nowadays would be willing to have their roofs caved in.

First—There is the $17,500 which becomes his property the minute he slips from his bathrobe and steps in to the ring.

Second—There is the almost certainty that he will be accorded the middleweight championship by popular acclaim if he wins.

Third—There is the glory, if he wins, of being the only boxer of his kind in the world—a boxer who after long absence from the ring came back and defeated a man who was admittedly the best of his class in the country; in short a "come back."

Some purse! Aye, aye.

Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries tried to come back after several years' absence. So did a lot of others. And they all got the same thing—an epitaph on their pugilistic tombstone which gave the information that he had been a great fighter in his day.

Packey left the ring weighing 137 and 138—his best fighting weight. In his two years of running breweries and automobiles he has added probably 20 pounds. He only wants 10 of it off. That is going to leave 10 there that can be said to be an accumulation of two years' idleness. He doesn't need it, and before he has stepped thirty minutes with a man as shifty as Mike Gibbons is, its safe bet he's going to wish he didn't have it.

Veteran ring men can't see Packey's chances at all. They base their assertion that the stockyards wonder is in for facing on the fact that no boxer ever has come back, and on the fact that Packey hasn't been boxing very much in the past two years; whereas the Shadowlike Mike has been fighting pretty steadily in that time.

"A man can't fight unless he's been fighting," said an old ring man today. "It doesn't take two years for a man to lose his judgment of distance and his hitting eye when he's not in the ring. Didn't I sit in Carson City and see Bob Fitzsimmons put the old smack on Jim Corbett, simply because Fitz had been fighting for two years steadily, where Jim hadn't been fighting? Fitz's condition wasn't any better than Jim's, but his eyes were."

"Again, Packey is going to meet a man in Mike who is at the zenith of his power. The St. Paul lad has been coming up for six years and he's now at the top of his career. Packey was at the top of his when he left the ring.

"Yes, we'll admit that Packey has lived a mighty clean life. He hasn't boozed nor smoked nor any of that stuff. Neither have a lot of other young chaps, but they couldn't stand 10 rounds of Mike Gibbons' game at that.

"But she's going to be a bird of a scrap anyhow, ain't she?"

That's what all New York thinks—that "she's going to be a bird of a scrap."

WINE CUT OFF BY WAR

(By United Press)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—"Himmel! Das ist eine schone Geschichte."

Some 1,000 or more members of the Chicago Schwaben Verein are giving vent to this expression, which in idiomatic English means—"This is an 'n'ell of a fix."

All the trouble is caused by the war in Europe. Each year the Schwaben Verein holds a three-day picnic at one of the suburban parks and the feature of the fair is wine—aged wine from the cellars of William of Wurtemberg, who is a hotel keeper as well as a king. It is a select distillation from choice fruits out of the king's vineyards. Each year in the last twenty-five, casks have been shipped and consumed long before the three-day celebration was done. This year however, the Wurtemberg ruler was too busy with the war to think of the wine. The picnic, however, will be opened tomorrow in spite of the lack of the famous nectar.

of a submarine on a dreadnought. The piece will be put on at the Manhattan opera house the big stage of which is admirably suited for an attraction of such huge proportions.

SOUTHERN FRANCE BLAMED BY NORTH OF YELLOW STREAK

Regiments From South Accused Of Having Turned and Run When Under Fire.

Highly Educated Soldier Says They Were Rushed Into Battle to See After Being Taken Out of the Shops and Didn't Get Accustomed to it.

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, Aug. 3.—(By Mail)—Northern France accuses Southern France of lacking courage, of possessing a yellow streak, of talking a whole lot and doing little in the way of slaughtering Germans.

Since the very commencement of the war stories have been going the rounds concerning the behavior of certain regiments, said regiments being recruits in the Midi-Southern France. Boiled down these stories have it that these regiments turned and fled in disorder immediately they found themselves under fire; that this happened more than once but the guilty regiments had been badly punished.

Is it true that Frenchmen from Southern France make bad soldiers? To the neutral observer this would not appear true for four of France's greatest generals hail from that corner of the country. These are General Joffre, General Gallieni, General Luch and General Castelnau.

Between Northern and Southern France there has always been a feud not unlike that which exists—or did exist—between the north and the south in the United States. So far as outsiders are concerned, France is France without distinction as to the particular part of the country one claims as home. But among themselves the Northerners look down on the Southerners and vice-versa; both claim to be the real and true French, both the speakers of the purest language; both claim chivalry as their own particular birthright and so on up and down the line.

I asked a highly educated soldier belonging to one of the regiments which are said to have distinguished themselves by bad "morale" under fire, what was in the story. He replied:

"We are blamed for what has happened in every war since wars began; we ran but we only did what the best soldiers in the world have done, and would have done again under similar circumstances.

"The war broke out suddenly; almost without a warning we were hustled out of offices, from behind counters, from desks and studies into uniforms and rushed into trains. Our trains went directly upon the battlefield and we were drenched actually under heavy fire. We did not have time to assemble, to get our bearings, anything. We got off the train to be shot down. Somebody ran. Somebody else followed. Two more followed the first and the others seeing some running away, followed suit. It is a psychological fact that this is what happens always under these circumstances.

"We should have been halted a mile to the rear, assembled and marched, in orderly fashion, into the firing line. In that way we would have had time to look around, to see where we were, to catch courage one from another. Wake the boldest man from heavy sleep, in the dead of night, and let him have a great danger to face. He will be afraid providing he is not too stupid to have any sensations at all. Wake him up and give him a few minutes time to get himself together, then let him face the danger and he will meet it as a brave man should.

"So it should have been with us. It was bad leadership to precipitate men who had never been under fire men fresh, from the arms of a sweetheart of mother, into such sudden fashion. Men who once faced bullets can be handled any way but not raw recruits."

The story that soldiers from Southern France lack courage is a doubt a slander. General Joffre comes from Marseilles, in the Pyrenees. General Gallieni from Reims. General Foch from the village of Villeneuve, like-wise of the mountains between France and Spain; while General Castelnau calls Garidou his home, this little town being on the plains about Toulouse.

These soldiers have already won places in history by their own courage; they are men in whose hands the fate of France rests; they are commanders in chief of all the French and thus for the whole world against they have accomplished wonders.

Yes they are from the Midi.

Lesson VIII.—Third Quarter, For Aug. 22, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Part of the Lesson, II Chron. xv, 1-15. Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Jas. iv, 8—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In the story of Jacob we had a sample of all the kings of the ten tribes, for there was not a good king among them. They all walked in the ways of Jacob, son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. There were a few good, right, I think—among the kings of Judah who did right in the eyes of the Lord, and Asa of today's lesson was one of them (verses 1, 2). His father, Abijah, son of Rehoboam, reigned only three years (xiii, 1, 2). The Lord gave him and his army a victory over the army of Jeroboam because they relied upon the Lord God of their fathers (xiii, 15). His words in xiii, 22, are always helpful—"Behold, God himself is with us for our captain." While the story of Asa is told in part of a chapter in the book of Kings (II Kings xv, 8-24), it occupies three chapters in Chronicles (xv, xvi, xvii), the first two telling of his thirty-five years of faithful and blessing and the last telling of five years of disobedience. What a pity that such a good king with such a long reign should waste his later years in wandering from God! But such always is man when he turns away from God. We cannot think of Asa as a lost man, though he acted so badly at the last, but he lost part of the full reward which might have been his (II John 8; I Cor. iii, 11-15).

Quietness and rest on every side and a whole hearted seeking, the Lord God spared the first ten years or more of his reign (xv, 1-7; xv, 12-15). Such rest and peace and quietness is the privilege of every true believer, and when He giveth quietness who then can make trouble whether in the case of a nation or a man only (Job xxiv, 29). It is our privilege thus to foretaste the kingdom when the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of service of righteousness quietness and assurance forever (Isa. xxxiii, 1, 17). The same Lord is ever saying to all, "Come unto me, * * * and I will give you rest" (Matt. xi, 28-30), and it is written, "We who have believed do enter into rest" (Heb. iv, 3). The great adversary hates peace always, and so he stirred up the Ethiopians with an army of over a million to go against Asa, who had only about half as many men, but Asa cried unto the Lord his God in the words of that ever memorable prayer of chapter xiv, 11, so brief yet so comprehensive, which has helped me many a time, and will prove a comfort and strength to all who appropriate it.

Every day and hour we should say, "We rest on Thee, and in Thy name we go." Compare part of the prayer of Jehoshaphat in chapter xx, 12, which we may also continually appropriate. Although the Ethiopians were such a huge host, yet because Asa relied on the Lord He delivered them into his hand, for the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show Himself strong in the behalf of (or as in the margin, strongly to hold with) them whose heart is perfect (or whole) toward Him (chapter xvi, 4, 9). This ninth verse is and has been for long years a continual strength and comfort to me and is working in me an increasing desire to have a whole heart for Him, and to see no one save Jesus only. The Spirit of God brought a message of encouragement to Asa by Azariah, whose name means the strength of Jehovah, which is found in lesson verses 1-7, and the exhortation in verse 7 is for us also who believe, "Be ye strong, therefore, and let not your hands be weak, for your work shall be rewarded." Salvation is never of works, but flows to him that worketh not but believeth (Rom. iv, 5) but we are thus saved by grace in order to serve the Living and True God, and all true service unto Him shall be rewarded (Luke xii, 11; Rev. xxii, 12; II John 8).

We need, by the exhortation of Eph. vi, 10, "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might." Asa, being thus encouraged, cleansed the land of idols, even destroying that of his own mother, but this cleansing was chiefly in Judah and Benjamin, many of the high places still remaining in Israel, over which he had no control, and yet many of them he did not fall to him in abundance when they saw that the Lord his God was with him; all because he was seeking the Lord with all his heart and soul (verses 8-15). They also renewed the altar and offered sacrifices, and there was no more war until the thirty-fifth year of his reign. But the next year the king of Israel came against him and, instead of relying upon the Lord, he made a league with the king of Syria. This brought a reproach from the Lord by Hiel the Bethelite, who reminded Asa how the Lord had wrought marvelously for him against the Ethiopians because he relied upon Him and how foolishly he had now acted by relying upon the king of Syria (xvi, 7-9).

Asa, being out of fellowship with the Lord, gave place to the devil, he came angry with the seer, and put him in prison and oppressed some of the people (xvi, 10). Near the close of his reign he became grievously diseased in his feet, but in this also he turned away from the Lord to purely human help.

JUBILEE OF "AIR BRAKE TOWN"

(By United Press)
Wilmerding, Pa., Aug. 21.—Wilmerding, or the "Air Brake Town," as it is generally known, has donned its best bib and tucker in preparation for a week's celebration of the 25th anniversary of the founding of the town as a borough. The celebration will be a triumph of the town with special services in all the churches. During the remainder of the week there will be a succession of historic meetings, parades, programs and outdoor sports. The celebration is in the nature of a tribute to the memory of the late George Westinghouse, who practically established the town when he removed the first of his big industries here from Allegheny.

ABE RUEF EXPECTS FREEDOM

(By United Press)

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—In local political circles there is much speculation as to the future of "Abe" Ruef, the former political boss of San Francisco (whose application for parole comes before the State board of pardons today). Ruef is now confined in San Quentin prison, under a 14-year sentence for accepting bribes. With the completion of half his sentence, allowing the usual time for good behavior, he has now become eligible to parole. So far as known no one will appear before the pardon board to oppose Ruef's application, and it is generally believed he stands a good chance of regaining his freedom at an early date.

Ruef was credited with being the political dictator of San Francisco during the incumbency of Mayor Eugene Schmitz. After the big political scandal that resulted in Ruef's conviction Schmitz left San Francisco and for several years resided in the East. He returned some time ago and is now engaged in an active campaign for Mayor, declaring he seeks vindication at the hands of the people. In the campaign speeches Schmitz promises to bring back the "good old times" and confidently predicts his election. The fact that Schmitz's candidacy and Ruef's efforts to regain his freedom have come at the same time are regarded in some quarters as significant. It is generally believed however, that should the pardon board grant Ruef's application it will attach conditions to his parole that will prevent his active return to political life in San Francisco for a long time to come.

Ruef himself has anticipated any possible objections that might be made to his release along the line by requesting that his parole be made conditional on his remaining away from San Francisco for at least 90 days, or until the present municipal campaign is ended.

SPORT NOTES

It is expected that Arlie Mucka, Wisconsin's greatest athlete, will be able to comply with the eligibility rules and join the Badger football squad.
Now that Karl Behr has defeated Maurice McLoughlin, tennis sharpsharps are up in the air in the matter of picking favorites for the national championship.
A "Jack Barry day" is to be staged by the Quaker City fans when the Red Sox clash with the Athletics in Philadelphia next month.
Billy Andrews, well known grand circuit trainer and pilot, believes that Lee Axworthy is a better trotter than was the famous Hamburg Belle.
Charles Brickley's engagement to coach the Johns Hopkins football squad has caused a boom in the gridiron game at the Baltimore institution.
Bud Anderson, well known Western lightweight, has retired to a ranch and in future will devote his attention to the raising of stock.
Charles Ellis, champion of the Interstate Billiard league, will play this season for Harry Davis, who holds the league franchise in Pittsburg.
Pitcher Tommy Atkins' fine work for a Cleveland amateur team has caused several big league scouts to give the former heaver of the Athletics the once over.
Billy McCarthy, who managed the late Luther McCarty and also Carl Morris, is in line for a position as matchmaker for the new boxing club at Duluth.
Willie Green, the Albany welterweight, has made a favorable impression on the New York boxing enthusiasts. He is an aggressive mitter and packs some effective blows.
Playing first base one day and pitching the next stamps George Siler, of the St. Louis Browns, as the most versatile pastime who has broken into the big yard in several years.
According to Manager McGraw inexcusable errors and bonehead plays furnish the answer for the poor work of the Giants this season. As John is right there on the job every day no better authority is needed.
The Pacific Coast league has done a wholesale business in pitching talent this season. Forty-two leavers are now doing the work for the six teams in the league and an additional 32 boxmen have been tried out and released.
Sam Harris, manager of "Kid" Williams, believes he has discovered a world-beating heavyweight. Harris finds answers to the name of Edward Brown, a farmer of Culpeper, Va. He stands 6 feet 10 3/4 inches and weighs 260 pounds.
Champions may come and champions may go, but I. J. Goldsmith, of Columbus, keeps right on copping the checker championship of the Buckeye State as regularly as the boards are brought forth for the annual play.
Pitcher Ralph Comstock has done considerable traveling the past two years. Detroit drafted him from the American association and sent him to Providence and from Providence he was shifted to the Red Sox. After the Sox returned him to Providence he was sold to Cincinnati but refused to join the Reds and jumped to the Pittsburg Federals.

TO CONTROL ALL BOXING

(By United Press)
Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—An organization to control the sport of pugilism all over America is expected to be given birth at a two-day conference of boxing promoters and managers which assembled here today. Tom Andrews, the Milwaukee promoter and sport writer, is the chief sponsor for the moment, which has received the endorsement of club managers and others interested in the game in all parts of the country. The proposed organization is not to concern itself with the money end of the game, but will draft and seek to enforce uniform rules concerning the weights, eliminating bouts, conflicts of dates, and other matters that in the past have seriously interfered with the best interests of the sport. Champions, it is expected, will have the law laid down to them by the new organization. Proposals as to when and with whom champions must fight how often they should defend their titles and the weights at which they should fight, are matters to receive the attention of the new organization.

GERMAN-AMERICANS TO PROTEST

(By United Press)
Canton, O., Aug. 21.—Resolutions declaring the love and loyalty of its members for the United States and its institutions, but at the same time protesting against the alleged ungrateful attitude of this government in regards to the European war, are expected to be adopted by the German-American Alliance of Ohio at its convention which opened here today for a two-day session. The convention is attended by representatives of the organization in every part of the state.

NEW ATLANTIC-PACIFIC SERVICE

(By United Press)
Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—Today's sailing of the Tampico marks the inauguration of a regular steamship service to be maintained by the Oregon-California Shipping Company between Philadelphia and Pacific coast ports, by way of the Panama canal. The Tampico is to be followed two weeks hence by the Eureka. Both vessels are between-deck steamships, especially adapted to hauling general cargo.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

(By United Press)
San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—"Religious Education and the New World" which is to be held at the exposition during the coming week under the auspices of the Religious Education Association of the United States. Henry Churchill King, president of the Chicago, and David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Stanford University, are scheduled as the principal speakers.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS ORGANIZING

a two days get-acquainted or friendship-making automobile tour through Clearfield county and nearby towns and country districts. A preliminary meeting was held last night in the Chamber of Commerce office. In attendance were James Mitchell, H. B. Powell, P. T. Davis, Geo. M. Rosser, John Dimeling, F. G. Betts, A. D. Gould, C. L. Torrence, Wm. Boyce and Secretary Bodine.

The general committee is composed of James Mitchell, H. B. Powell, P. T. Davis. Three special committees are being organized to have charge of the plans and details of the trip, viz., committee on routes, committee on advertising, and committee on organization and transportation. The personnel of these committees will be announced in a few days.

Business men have received the announcement of the tour with great enthusiasm and it is expected that every Clearfield firm will be represented, including professional offices.

The tour will be purely one of friendship making. Business will not be solicited. The residents of the many neighboring towns and their surrounding territory will be encouraged to "trade at home", when their home business houses can satisfy their requirements, and never to go outside the county and nearby towns for merchandise when they can buy it near at hand. Keep the money in the Clearfield district. Strong emphasis will be put upon the trading at home idea as a means of helping build up and support the home community.

Trading with mail order houses will be discouraged. People all along the line of the tour will be urged to make their purchases from firms who have invested their money in Clearfield county and other nearby towns, and not send their money to the big mail order houses in distant cities. Money spent with outside concerns can never do our own section any good. It is gone, never to return. Mail order houses get hundreds of thousands of dollars from the Clearfield district that should be kept at home, where it stands some chance of drifting back into the pockets of those who pay it out. Money invested at home enriches and makes more prosperous the entire home district.

Good-fellowship among the citizens of our many county communities will be encouraged. Enthusiasm over and loyalty toward the development of the wonderful natural resources and business advantages of our county and neighboring business territory will be inspired by series of business and social talks all along the route.

The element of selfishness will be eliminated and plans for a busier, richer and more prosperous county will be advocated. The exchange of good up to date business ideas will be pushed to the fore-front. Every opportunity will be given to make permanent social and business friendship. Good will, broad mindedness, liberality in business and the personal element of friendship founded on confidence in each other acquired by personal contact, will be stressed. Merchants, professional men, bankers, manufacturers, farmers, everybody interested in the development of Clearfield county and in arousing a great big general spirit of good fellowship throughout this entire section, are all urged to make their plans to join the Trade Expansion and Get-Acquainted Automobile trip on September 9 and 10.

An enjoyable and profitable trip is guaranteed to all who participate. As the plans develop further information will be published. The cordial reception that the announcement has received and the active assistance that the business men have already promised, and are giving, assures the complete success of the tour.

NEGROES TO HOLD JUBILEE

A SOULFUL SLEEPER

(By United Press)
Columbus, O., Aug. 21.—Edward Goetz is some sleeper. He climbed out of his bed while sound asleep the other night, walked to the window and fell to the sidewalk. It was a twenty-foot drop. Goetz was still asleep when the policeman found him. They shook him and he awoke. "You to the hospital," said the cops. But Goetz went back up stairs to finish his sleep.

CHARGES BROUGHT AGAINST DRIVER IN AUTO ACCIDENT

District Attorney Will Try Case In Civil Courts—Fine of $100 to $300 if Guilty

Affair Seems to be Climax of Series of Instances Exhausting Authorities
Patience—Matters Not Yet Fully Decided.

The district attorney has taken steps toward bringing criminal charges against Emory Shaw for running an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and reckless driving. It is also probable that the charge of aggravated assault and battery will be added to these. Shaw will be held on bail pending the result of a hearing. The fine if found guilty in the cases of driving while under the influence of liquor is a minimum of $100 and not over $300 and the revoking of the drivers license.

It was the expressed opinion of the authorities about town yesterday evening that such instances as have been noticed lately, similar to that of last Thursday evening, are becoming more frequent and are rapidly exhausting the patience of the officials. The accident last Thursday evening, which the district attorney is taking action on seems to have been the climax of a series of similar affairs.

The district attorney announced this afternoon that he had not fully decided on the course of procedure, nor the extent to which the charges will be made.

The disposition of the injured boy's family toward the matter is not yet known, but it is the belief of those in a position to know, that the family have no intentions of bringing civil charges to recover damages but will let the district attorney proceed with his action.

GLASS FACTORY HAS PASSED LIMIT OF GUARANTEE

Will Make Improvements on Grounds Facing River

The Kupfer Glass Works has already passed the payroll limit guaranteed to the Chamber of Commerce. They are more than a year and ten months ahead of their guarantee. This is making good, plus.

When the glass factory was persuaded to come here by the Chamber of Commerce, it was guaranteed to pay a certain amount in five years in wages. They have been here three years and two months and have paid out up to this time the same amount that they had guaranteed for the five years.

Mr. Kupfer of the cut glass plant, is contemplating making improvements which will make the river front more attractive.

LIVELY CAMPAIGN IN MANY STATES FOR FALL ELECTIONS

Although Year Seems To be "Off" Numerous States Are Hot of Fights

Missouri Campaign Ended at Primaries—State Officials to be Chosen in Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky and Mississippi—Interest in Much of the Strife.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—In the country at large this is a political "off year," but in several of the States lively campaigns are now in progress and will culminate on Nov. 2. The states in which governors and other of the principal state officials will be named this fall are Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky and Mississippi.

The campaign in Missouri was virtually ended by the primaries two weeks ago. The ticket named by the Democratic party at that time is assured of election. Theodore G. Bilbo, the present lieutenant governor, has been selected to succeed Earl Brewer in the governorship. Contests for minor state offices which were not decided at the first primary will be settled at the "run-off" next week.

Much of the interest in the Kentucky campaign ceased with the general primaries held in that state two weeks ago today. The big issue was the contest in the Democratic party over the prohibition question. Both the "wets" and the "drys" fought to name the candidate for governor. Former Congressman A. O. Stanley, the successful aspirant for the head of the Democratic ticket, favors a continuation of county local option. As Edwin P. Morrow, the Republican candidate for governor, is committed to the same policy, the contest over the prohibition issue is ended so far as the present campaign is concerned. From now on the contest will be a straight fight between the Democrats and Republicans on general party issues. Stanley is favored by the fact that Kentucky is normally a Democratic state. His Republican opponent, however, is young and aggressive and is counted on to make a good fight. The Republicans are counting on a certain amount of disaffection among the Democrats over the prohibition issue to help them to victory. The Progressives and Prohibitionists will have party tickets in the field, but neither is expected to figure prominently in the election.

The political situation in Maryland is similar to that in Kentucky. Democrats and Republicans will fight for the governorship and other officials on general party issues. The national leaders of both parties are expected to take a more or less active interest in the effect that a victory there in November may be expected to have on the national campaign next year. The nominations in Maryland will be made at the general primaries next month. United States Senator Blair Lee and Emerson C. Harrington, present State comptroller, are the rival candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. W. T. Warburton and O. E. Weller are contesting for the place at the head of the Republican ticket. Because of the general return of the Progressives to the Republican party, the Republicans are entering the campaign more confident than for several years.

To the country at large the campaign in Massachusetts furnishes more points of interest than the contests in any other State where elections are to be held this year. The tariff is the underlying issue of the campaign in the Bay State this fall, as it probably will be throughout a large section of the country a year hence. There is a demand on the part of Republican leaders and business men for revision upward, and the claim is made that but for the war the Underwood-Wilson law would have ruined the industries in New England. But in this connection it is interesting to note that many leading Republican newspapers, while admitting the necessity for tariff correction, declare unhesitatingly that there should be no return to the regime of 10 or 15 years ago.

The state tickets of all parties in Massachusetts will be named at the general primaries one month from today, when the new law abolishing party enrollment will be given its first State-wide trial. There have been rumors of "plots" on the part of the politicians to take advantage of the provisions of the new law to defeat the wishes of the voters at large. But with the near approach of the primaries these rumors have faded away and the feeling prevails that no great change in methods or results will follow the workings of the new law.

Governor Walsh is confidently expected to receive a third nomination at the hands of the Democratic party. The contests for the head of the Republican ticket lies between former Congressman Samuel W. McCall and Lieutenant Governor Grafton D. Cushing. The "pedestrian campaign" of former Congressman Dietrick for the democratic nomination, the independent candidacy of former Governor Foss for the Republican nomination and the aspirations of William Shaw, general secretary of the Christian endeavor societies, to be elected governor on a prohibition platform, serve to give variety to the campaign with little possibility of affecting the general results.

HUNDREDS MOTOR TO THE EXPOSITION OVER CONTINENT

Hundreds of Americans Are Spending Their Vacations Traveling Overland

Many Drivers Crack San Francisco Traffic Regulation Every Day—Many Different Types of Cars—Auto's From Every State in Union Can be Seen in Garages.

BY FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

San Francisco, Aug. 21.—Hop in your fliver and come out to the fair. There are now hundreds, possibly thousands, of automobiles from every part of the country in San Francisco today. Some have been here long enough after trans-continental drives to be cleaned up so that they look like home cars. In that event the fact that they are several hundred miles from home is not revealed until they kick up the dust in your face and you catch a glimpse of their license tag. Others roll through the streets coated with dust and splattered with many thicknesses of mud. They are the new arrivals.

Flivvering to the Fair is obviously the way in which hundreds of Americans are spending their vacations. The Ferris are carrying scores of machines across the bay daily as they roll into Oakland and smelt along the last leg of their journey to Frisco. Packed away midst suitcases, tents, coats, and coverings of every description are dusty, sun-burned men and women. They may look like tramps, but they're happy.

Some of them have traveled from ocean to ocean. Others came from the northwest, middlewest or the south. But all have seen more of the country than they ever saw before or had hoped to see. Many of them have lived in the open for weeks. Fearing their appetites, the sea lions on the rocks off the Cliff House have disappeared. It is a real invasion of a great many wheels; an army of men, women and children drawn into the open and across the continent by the exposition, and, having been drawn, entering into the thrills of the new experience with vigor.

All the trans-continental trips are not being made "in the rough," as one motor enthusiast put it, but in hundreds of cases the parties have slept in the open at night, cooked their meals at the roadside and "got back to nature." Hotels are patronized only when the weather is bad or it is decided to grant special dispensation for a meal off a table, a tub and a soft bed. In the "de lux" trips, travel is by easy stages and the schedule is so framed as to bring the party within reach of a hotel by nightfall.

In one garage the other night cars from Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey and Michigan were standing side by side. In another were machines from New York, Illinois, Georgia, Alabama, Wisconsin and Indiana. The whole list of the states of the Union might be gone through an alphabet everyone there is representative car being cleaned up in some garage. Every driver observes the traffic rules he knew at home, but knowing nothing of San Francisco's rules the latter are cracked in fifty different ways each day.

The different types of cars which have traveled over desert and plain, forded rivers and climbed mountains, is not only startling, but in some cases appalling. The big machines are taken as a matter of course, but you ought to see some of the weather-beaten little fellows. It seems that for some of them every breath will be their last as the long journey is completed. They sneak into a garage with tail dragging and all pep gone. See them again, however, a short time afterward when the mud has been taken off and the dust cleaned out of their lungs and you'll see them, tail up and snorting, just as frisky as the day they left home.

SCORES OF BODIES FOUND AT SCENE OF TORNADO

SATURDAY EVENING AUGUST 21 1915

A JAW-BREAKER

To the American ear there is something suggestive of the elephantine in "majestaetsbeleidigung" German word for less-majesty or crime against the king but this word is light as air compared with the ponderosity of the Flemish or Low German word for horseless carriage which is said to have been adopted a few years ago by a committee of scholars who wished to frame a generally understood word that would signify "a carriage that is worked by means of petroleum that travels fast, that has no horses, and that does not run on rails," and who, after much intellectual wrestling, achieved the following: "Benzelpaardelooszonderspoorwegpetroirijtuig."

This fearful and wonderful thing may be wholly insignificant and therefore a just source of pride, but from the point of view of less ambitious and less resourceful outsiders it would seem that, rather than shoulder such a burden, it would have been better even to stoop to borrow the French "automobile" or the English "motor-car." German scholars hold that the English language is "dead" while their own is "living," that is, they are able at any time to construct out of the elementary constituents of German a new word which will at once be intelligible to all who speak the language, while English-speaking scholars are forced to dig up roots out of the Latin or Greek. That may be, but the average citizen would prefer that a light and serviceable article be borrowed from foreign sources than to stagger under an unspeakable word such as— (we spare the printer). Even awkward circumlocution is preferable to a monster stretching in bewildering perspective across a whole page.

THE STAFF OF LIFE

The promise of the vast yield of a billion bushels of wheat in the United States this year, at a time when it is imperative that Europe's shortage be made up elsewhere, renders uncommonly interesting and even topical the following authoritative statement of a scientific expert to the effect that wheat is exceptionally qualified and complete as a food, containing all the elements necessary to sustain life indefinitely:

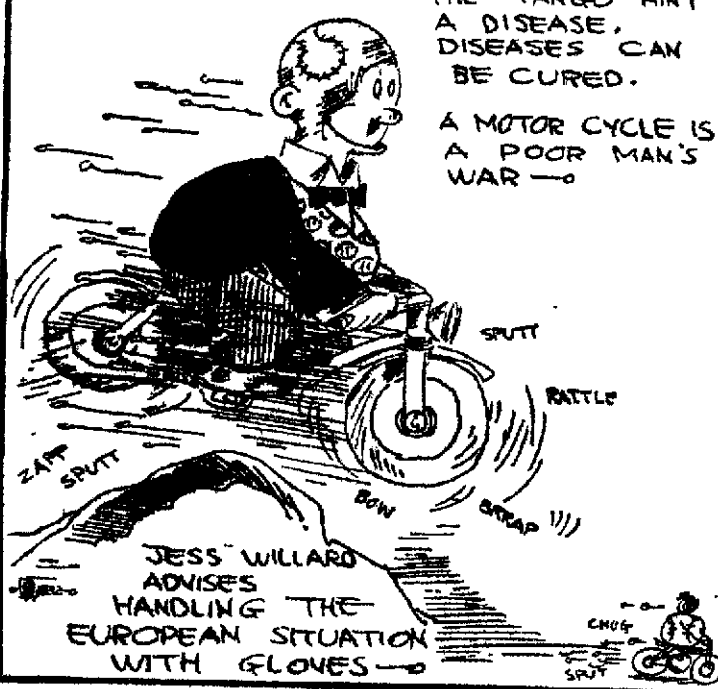

"In the human body there are seventeen combinations of the fourteen elements of food: water, gelatine, fat, phosphate of lime, albumen, carbonate of lime, fibrin, fluoride of calcium, phosphate of soda, phosphate of potash, phosphate of magnesia, chloride of sodium (common salt), sulphate of soda, carbonate of soda, sulphate of potash, peroxide of iron, silica. Is there any single food which contains fourteen elements, or in other words which supplies carbonates, phosphates and nitrates? There are a few that do this, one of which is wheat. The nitrates are found in the outside shell, the carbonates in the main portion, constituting about two-thirds of the entire grain, and the phosphates in the chit or germ. In fine white flour the centre alone is used, consisting of carbonates, or heat-producing substance with but a very slight mixture of nitrates. It is a wonderful fact that a grain of wheat contains all of the fourteen elements in very nearly the proper proportion. Whole-wheat bread contains all that the body requires, and it has been proved that it will sustain life indefinitely."

It is thus shown that wheat is par excellence the staff of human life, the chief of the good gifts presented by the vegetable kingdom to man.

Such it has been from the most ancient times. The bread of the ancients was the bread from wheat. They did not know how to analyze its constituent elements in the modern scientific method, but they perceived its extraordinary virtues and paid it the highest of tributes. In their system of symbols it was made to represent the good that is lived and practiced in a noble and perfect human life, just as the thirst-satisfying water of the clear cold spring, and the stimulating wine from the fruit of the vine, were made to represent that truth or knowledge which was as necessary to the perfect flowering of a good life as liquids are necessary for the profitable enjoyment of solid food.

Among the many superlative advantages of our great country is its situation within the zone where this most perfect of foods—the chief staff of the body's life—can be successfully grown in enormous quantities.

RABID RUDOLPH SAYS—

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Charleroi is among the highly important forge-and-foundry cities which have been brought behind the invading German lines. The following description of this widely famed industrial district was issued by the National Geographic Society today.

"Charleroi captured by the Germans at the outbreak of the war, was the center of the Belgian iron industry. Situated in the midst of a district rich in coal and iron, where there was an abundance of cheap thrifty, industrious labor, the little city made its products known throughout Europe, South America and the Near East. More than 400,000 people found support in a surrounding area of 190 square miles, while 40,000 men were employed in the factories and foundries of Charleroi.

"Against its broken sky-line, the smoke of its furnace fires ascend day and night, and close behind another freight train sped over the thick network of railroad in the hill country with an unending stream of metal material and manufactured ware. The highly developed railway net was, however, insufficient for the transport of the district's goods, much of which found its markets over the canals from Charleroi to Brussels and to Mons, thence through the main arteries of the Scheldt basin to the port of Antwerp and to Northern France.

"The coal mines around the city were operated at depths of 3,000 feet and more. The coal belt reaches in a long, narrow band, northeast-southwest, from Northern Belgium into France. The basis of the industry of the Charleroi district were its smelter and iron-working factories. Here, within two miles of the city, the iron works of Couillet turned out one-third of all the cast iron produced in Belgium. Large nail factories, glass works both for blown and plate glass, and a number of lesser industries thrive. There was a large increase of immigration from Northern France into the region, and the famous forest on Caesar's time was fast shrinking to mere classical memory.

"Charleroi was founded in 1666, and named after the willful sovereign, Charles II of Spain, by its Spanish governor Rodrigo. It lies upon the Sambre, and its communications with France and with the commercial centers of its own country are excellent. By the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, it became French and was fortified by the renowned Vauban. The little city twice withstood the might of William of Orange.

"There is a strong French element in the city's character. Many Frenchmen were in its mills and factories, and French peasant families grew much of the Charleroi's produce in the comparatively thin soil of the region. In 1894, it fell again into the hands of the French, later to become Dutch and finally Belgian. Wellington, the best-remembered lord among the Belgians, directed the re-fortification of the city in 1816. The Germans found the city's defenses negligible when they swept over the place in August, 1914.

DON'T'S

- Don't use coal oil to start a slow fire.
- Don't try to start any fire with coal oil. It is dangerous.
- Don't polish a stove while it is hot.
- Don't fill an oil or gasoline stove after dark. If you must fill them, never do so while lighted, as the flame might set fire to the vapor in the air and ignite the oil, causing an explosion.
- Don't leave a lamp burning when away from home.
- Don't leave a lamp turned down low, it is liable to cause an explosion.
- Don't use swinging lamps near an open widow.
- Don't use any but safety matches.
- Don't permit clothing or other articles in gasoline, benzene, or naphtha in the house.
- Don't throw gasoline, benzene, or naphtha in the sink or cesspools.
- Don't throw water on flames caused by burning gasoline, benzene, naphtha, or coal oil, as it spreads the flames. Smother it with a rug, quilt or heavy clothing.
- Don't clean beds with inflammable liquids.
- Don't light a match when looking for leaking gas.
- Don't put ashes in wooden boxes or barrels. Use metal cans.
- Don't throw hot ashes against fences or buildings.
- Don't fail to burn all rubbish. Watch it, and be sure the fire is out before you leave it.
- Don't burn rubbish near fences or buildings.
- Don't permit rubbish, paper or greasy rags to accumulate.

DOG DAYS AT WILDWOOD

(By United Press)
 Wildwood, N. J., Aug. 19.—The members of the fashionable Summer colony at this resort "went to the dogs" today. The occasion was the annual dog parade over the famous five-mile promenade. The pageant included canines of every breed, size and color, and even the stray mongrels of the streets were not barred from the prize competition. Among some members of the colony, especially the family matrons, considerable comment was aroused by the fact that the dogs were given precedence over the babies who are to have their annual parade next Saturday.

 REV. ROBERT C. PETERS

LINCOLN ON TEMPERANCE.

On September 28, 1863, a delegation of the Sons of Temperance waited on President Lincoln. In an address to them, Mr. Lincoln said:

"If I were better known than I am you would not need to be told that in the advocacy of the cause of temperance you have in me a friend and sympathizer. When I was a young man I, in a humble way, made temperance speeches and I think I may say to this day I have never, by my example belied what I then said.

"I think that the most reasonable men of the world have long since agreed that intemperance is one of the greatest if not the greatest of the evils among mankind."

This is the man that the liquor interests advertise as a saloon-keeper, a drinker of beer and an opposer of prohibition.

WHAT CAN ACCOUNT FOR THIS?

Of course prohibition does not prohibit, but the Temperance society of the Methodist church has received reports of not less than thirteen failures of breweries and distilleries within the past few months.

The production of beer has declined during the past eight months millions of barrels, and of whiskey, millions of gallons. The federal revenue from this source is falling off rapidly.

The stocks and bonds of the Distillers' Securities corporation, the American Maltting company and similar concerns are, to say the very least not quite as lively as a chigger at a picnic.

GERMANS NOT ALWAYS BEER-DRINKERS

Prof. Frederick von Reithdorf says: "The Germans adopted the drinking habit from foreigners. Neither the word wine (from the Latin, vinum) nor beer (from the Latin, bibere) are of German origin.

"Julius Caesar is authority for the fact that there was Prohibition in Germany 1900 years ago. In his 4th book on the Gallic war at the close of the second chapter, he says of the brave "Schwabenvolk" "Vinum ad omnino importari non sinunt quod ea re laborum ferendum remollescere homines atque effeminari arbitrantur." (They do not allow the importation of wine at all because they are of the opinion that wine weakens and effeminates people, rendering them incapable of a strenuous life.

PERSONAL LIBERTY HAS ITS LIMITS

"A man may not even do with his own body what he pleases," says Charles Steidle.

"Suppose he tries to kill it—to commit suicide. If he succeeds, Billy Sunday says he will go to hell. If he fails he will go to jail. And yet if the United States government should decide to go to war with Germany or any other nation it assumes the right, if necessary, to send him to the front to be shot down. He belongs to the state as well as to himself. We have recently passed most stringent laws against the sale and use of certain kinds of drugs, because of the great injury which their use inflicts upon the human mind and body.

"If the state should decide that the saloon is a menace, and that is dispensing poison, then society has a right to take the saloon must go, no matter how it may affect anybody's personal liberty. We accept the restriction which the state imposes upon us in other relationships. Why not accept it with regard to the saloon, especially since it has been so clearly demonstrated that the interests of the saloon are always opposed to the interests of the workingman?"

SNEERS THAT ARE BECOMING SICKLY

Nobody but an idiot now sneers at temperance people as "crude," "fanatical," "busybodies," etc. In fact the temperance movement has taken on quality quite rapidly of late. For instance, listen to this long eared fanatic:

"There is nothing to be said in favor of alcohol. It is a drug; it is not a food, it is not even a stimulant. It impairs the action of the heart, the liver, the stomach, the kidneys. It congests the blood vessels. It lowers the temperature. It aggravates the effect of shock. It spoils havoc with the muscles and with the nerve centres. In the emotions it destroys ideals, it produces callousness to moral obligations, and it multiplies lunacy and crime. Lastly, it gives an entirely delusive sensation of increased efficiency. These statements are not arguable. They cannot be challenged. Its effects on the conduct of the war are notorious."

Who said this?

Why this is the brag of that bally ass, Arnold Bennett. Evidently, he is certainly in need of brewery culture.

READY FOR THE ELGIN RACES

(By United Press)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—Practice for the Chicago Automobile club and Elgin national challenge cup races, to be run on the Elgin circuit tomorrow and Saturday, is ended and the drivers and their assistants are today putting their racing motors in final conditions for the hard tests. Ralph De Palma will defend the trophies against a field that will include Earl Cooper, Gil Anderson and other of the most famous auto racers in the country. There is every prospect of exceedingly fast time. Some of Palma averaged better than 100 miles an hour. Since then, of course has been greatly improved. There is every prospect that the top in the coming races will average around seventy-eight of eighty miles an hour. The officials entering the meet are George F. Bell, chairman of the contest committee; Sam Beecroft, New York, referee; and Fred J. Wagner, starter.

TRIENNIAL TEST OF BIG MORTARS

(By United Press)

New York, Aug. 20.—The 20th mortars at Fort Totten, which are used up to prevent a hostile force from approaching this city by way of Long Island Sound, are to undergo their triennial tests during the beginning today. The big guns are regarded as the most formidable of our coast defense weapons, lacking the range of the big guns constituting the outer defense. Three years ago, when the last test of the mortars was made, officers at Fort Totten warned residents within a radius of a few miles to take pictures from the open windows and park drives. This year the officers considered warning unnecessary, as there was vibration of any consequence the years ago.

ITALIAN EXODUS SMALL

(By United Press)

Washington, Aug. 19.—The small of Italians leaving the national capital to join their colors is not nearly so great as it was during the Turkish war. The outpouring at this time nearly demolished the district of the city. The reason is that comparatively few Italian immigrants have come into the last few years.

MUSICAL COMEDIES MORE OF A HIT THIS YEAR THAN DRAMA

Play Already On [Will Continue To Draw Crowds After Hot Weather Interruption]

Pieces to be Imported From Drury Lane Expected to Supercede All Others Brought From the Famous London Playhouse—"Stolen Orders" Has Tremendous Scenery.

New York, Aug. 20.—If the theatrical season of 1915-16 is now in full swing, as the newspapers state, then the "Gloom" who predicted that the spoken drama and higher forms of dramatic art are dead wasn't very far off after all. The early-season offerings, with one or two exceptions, have been of a most mediocre character. Unless the new plays to be presented next week score better than those already served up since the beginning of the season, several of which have resumed their runs after the hot weather interruption, will continue to draw the crowds.

So far the musical pieces have panned out better than the straight dramatic attractions. "The Blue Paradise," at the Casino, is a tune-ful operetta adapted from the Viennese and bids fair to be as successful as one of its predecessors. An equally favorable reception has been accorded the Herve-Briquet musical comedy, "The Girl Who Smiles," which is rounding out its second week at the Lyric. Then we have "The Girl From Utah," with Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian and Joe Cawthorne. The success with which this piece met when brought into New York at the close of the spring season, after an equally successful road tour, was sufficient in the eyes of the management to justify its revival for a limited engagement at the Knickerbocker Theatre.

And Speaking of the Knickerbocker serves as a reminder that next month will see the passing of this well known and popular theatre as a home of the legitimate drama. The Klaw and Erlanger and Charles Frohman interests have accepted an offer from a film corporation which will take possession early in September and convert the theatre into a moving picture house. Regular theatre prices from $2 down will prevail.

But to return the current attractions at the local theatres. "Under Fire," at the Hudson, is pronounced by the critics generally as the best of the recent crop of war dramas. "The Boomerang," at the Belasco, is a highly entertaining comedy, though hardly up to the best Belasco standard. Of farces we have "Some Baby" and "Search Me," the first holding forth at the Fulton and the second at the Gaiety. Both have been well received by those who enjoy an evening of rollicking entertainment.

The new plays presented this week have included "Common Clay," at the Republic; "Mr. Myd's Mystery," at the Comedy; and "Rolling Stones," at the Harris. "Common Clay" has met with a reception that seems to bear out the judgement of the Boston players, who liked the piece so well that it was kept running in stock in the New England metropolis nearly the whole of last season. It is a really strong play and one that affords Jane Cowl and John Mason an excellent opportunity to display their talents.

"Mr. Myd's Mystery" has served to introduce Taylor Holmes as a star. "Rolling Stones" is the new Edgar Selwyn comedy. It is along lines very similar to "A Country Boy," but whether it proves as successful as the last-named play remains to be seen.

May Irwin has made arrangements to bring her new comedy, "No. 13 Washington Square," by Leroy Scott, to the Park Theatre for an engagement beginning next Monday night. The piece will be produced under the direction of William Collier, which ought to be a strong factor in its success, providing William is as good a stage director as he is a comedian.

Among the plays now in rehearsal and scheduled for production in the near future are "The Missing Link," by Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey which Charles Dillingham will present at the Globe, with Elsie Janis in the stellar role. The Jules Eckert Goodman play, "Just Outside the Door," which Henry Miller is preparing to produce in association with Klaw and Erlanger, and "Brother Masons," a comedy which H. H. Frazer will offer, with Frank McIntyre in the leading role.

The war in Europe is not to deprive us this year of the pleasure of seeing the customary big melodrama, imported direct from Drury Lane. The coming play is entitled "Stolen Orders" and it has been running in the big London play houses for two years. The entire production, including nearly 150 actors with speaking parts, will be brought over. The scenic specialties, according to advance announcement, make those of "The Whip" look like a Sunday school tableaux in comparison. The play shows the destruction of a Zep- pelin by an aeroplane and the attack

PACKEY EXPECTED TO FAIL IN TRY TO "COME BACK"

Middleweight Fighter Has Been Out of Ring For Two Years Running Brewery

Will Meet Mike Gibbons in Zenith of Power and Battle for Large Purse—Veteran Ringman Can't See Packey's Chances at All.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES (United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Aug. 20.—Packey McFarland has a lot to fight for when he steps into the ring with Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul wraith, on the night of Sept. 11. He will be battling for three things, for any one of which the majority of boxers nowadays would be willing to have their roofs caved in.

First—There is the $17,500 which becomes his property the minute he slips from his bathrobe and steps in to the ring.

Second—There is the almost certainty that he will be accorded the middleweight championship by popular acclaim if he wins.

Third—There is the glory, if he wins, of being the only boxer of his kind in the world—a boxer who after long absence from the ring came back and defeated a man who was admittedly the best of his class in the country; in short a "come back."

Some purse! Aye, aye.

Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries tried to come back after several years' absence. So did a lot of others. And they all got the same thing—an epitaph on their pugilistic tombstone which gave the information that he had been a great fighter in his day.

Packey left the ring weighing 137 and 138—his best fighting weight. In his two years of running breweries and automobiles he has added probably 20 pounds. He only wants 10 of it off. That is going to leave 10 there that can be said to be an accumulation of two years' idleness. He doesn't need it, and before he has stepped thirty minutes with a man as shifty as Mike Gibbons is, its safe bet he's going to wish he didn't have it.

Veteran ring men can't see Packey's chances at all. They base their assertion that the stockyards wonder is in for facing on the fact that no boxer ever has come back, and on the fact that Packey hasn't been boxing very much in the past two years; whereas the Shadowlike Mike has been fighting pretty steadily in that time.

"A man can't fight unless he's been fighting," said an old ring man today. "It doesn't take two years for a man to lose his judgment of distance and his hitting eye when he's not in the ring. Didn't I sit in Carson City and see Bob Fitzsimmons put the old smack on Jim Corbett, simply because Fitz had been fighting for two years steadily, where Jim hadn't been fighting? Fitz's condition wasn't any better than Jim's, but his eyes were."

"Again, Packey is going to meet a man in Mike who is at the zenith of his power. The St. Paul lad has been coming up for six years and he's now at the top of his career. Packey was at the top of his when he left the ring."

"Yes, we'll admit that Packey has lived a mighty clean life. He hasn't boozed nor smoked nor any of that stuff. Neither have a lot of other young chaps, but they couldn't stand 10 rounds of Mike Gibbons' game at that."

"But she's going to be a bird of a scrap anyhow, ain't she?"

That's what all New York thinks—that "she's going to be a bird of a scrap."

WINE CUT OFF BY WAR

(By United Press)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—"Himmell Das ist eine schone Geschichte."

Some 1,000 or more members of the Chicago Schwaben Verein are giving vent to this expression, which in idiomatic English means—"This is an 'n'ell of a fix."

All the trouble is caused by the war in Europe. Each year the Schwaben Verein holds a three-day picnic at one of the suburban parks and the feature of the fair is wine—aged wine from the cellars of William of Wurtemberg, who is a hotel keeper as well as a king. It is a select distillation from choice fruits out of the king's vineyards. Each year in the last twenty-five, casks have been shipped and consumed long before the three-day celebration was done. This year however, the Wurtemberg ruler was too busy with the war to think of the wine. The picnic, however, will be opened tomorrow in spite of the lack of the famous nectar.

A submarine on a dreadnought. The piece will be put on at the Manhattan opera house the big stage of which is admirably suited for an attraction of such huge proportions.

SOUTHERN FRANCE BLAMED BY NORTH OF YELLOW STREAK

Regiments From South Accused Of Having Turned and Run When Under Fire.

Highly Educated Soldier Says They Were Rushed Into Battle to See After Being Taken Out of the Shops and Didn't Get Accustomed to it.

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, Aug. 3.—(By Mail)—Northern France accuses Southern France of lacking courage, of possessing a yellow streak, of talking a whole lot and doing little in the way of slaughtering Germans.

Since the very commencement of the war stories have been going the rounds concerning the behavior of certain regiments, said regiments being recruits in the Midi-Southern France. Boiled down these stories have it that these regiments turned and fled in disorder immediately they found themselves under fire; that this happened more than once but the guilty regiments had been badly punished.

Is it true that Frenchmen from Southern France make bad soldiers? To the neutral observer this would not appear true for four of France's greatest generals hail from that corner of the country. These are General Joffre, General Gallieni, General Luch and General Castelnau.

Between Northern and Southern France there has always been a feud not unlike that which exists—or did exist—between the north and the south in the United States. So far as outsiders are concerned, France is France without distinction as to the particular part of the country one claims as home. But among themselves the Northerners look down on the Southerners and vice-versa; both claim to be the real and true French, both the speakers of the purest language; both claim chivalry as their own particular birthright and so on up and down the line.

I asked a highly educated soldier belonging to one of the regiments which are said to have distinguished themselves by bad "morale" under fire, what was in the story. He replied:

"We are blamed for what has happened in every war since wars began; we ran but we only did what the best soldiers in the world have done, and would have done again under similar circumstances."

"The war broke out suddenly; almost without a warning we were hustled out of offices, from behind counters, from desks and studies into uniforms and rushed into trains. Our trains went directly upon the battlefield and we were drenched actually under heavy fire. We did not have time to assemble, to get our bearings, anything. We got off the train to be shot down. Somebody ran. Somebody else followed. Two more followed the first and the others seeing some running away, followed suit. It is a psychological fact that this is what happens always under these circumstances."

"We should have been halted a mile to the rear, assembled and marched, in orderly fashion, into the firing line. In that way we would have had time to look around, to see where we were, to catch courage one from another. Wake the boldest man from heavy sleep, in the dead of night, and let him have a great danger to face. He will be afraid providing he is not too stupid to have any sensations at all. Wake him up and give him a few minutes time to get himself together, then let him face the danger and he will meet it as a brave man should."

"So it should have been with us. It was bad leadership to precipitate men who had never been under fire men fresh, from the arms of a sweetheart of mother, into such sudden fashion. Men who once faced bullets can be handled any way but not raw recruits."

The story that soldiers from Southern France lack courage is a doubt a slander. General Joffre comes from Marseilles, in the Pyrenees. General Gallieni from Reims. General Foch from the village of Vohéme, like-wise of the mountains between France and Spain; while General Castelnau calls Carcassonne his home, this little town being on the plains about Toulouse.

These soldiers have already won places in history by their own courage; they are men in whose hands the fate of France rests; they are commanders in chief of all the French and thus for the whole world against they have accomplished wonders.

Yes they are from the Midi. The Southern Frenchman does not lack courage, nor does he lack patriotism. He is different, yes, from the Northern French brother, but he is all there just the same. He talks differently, acts differently, thinks differently, dresses differently, fights differently and—in this great war—dies differently!

FRENCH PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY

By United Press

Paris, Aug. 20.—A combined message from President Wilson was sent the greetings received by President Poincaré today on the occasion of his birthday anniversary. Other messages received at the Elysee came from the King of England, the Czar of Russia, the King of Italy, the King of the Belgians and the rulers of the neutral states. Poincaré was born at Bar-le-Duc, Aug. 20, 1854.
